He Has a Clean Record of Twenty Years' Bervice-A Biographical Sketch.

Honesty, intellectuality and experionce consutute a trinity of excellencies which rarely center in a single candidate for public favor. Many men possess one of these, fewer possess two, and, at rare intervals, a man possessing all three appears. The subject of has been demonstrated by a long line of judicial findings and official acts which have stood the test of legal adjudication. His experience stands in the record of a score of years as pro-bate judge. Take him for all in all it were hard to find a superior candidate.

spent in this community. He graduated from the city high school in 1866, with high honors, and turned his attention at once to legal pursuits. He studied law with Judge Harlan, distinguishing himself for his grasp of hereditary rights, estates and trusts.

Huence every cithen now to we ferred to as an experiment, an untried measure in tariff legislation. There is nothing more wrong than this. It is simply a revision of the law of protection of the American industries and American isboring men."

Alfred Wolcott, Jacob Eisenhardt and Isaac Lamoreaux were present and

In 1872 he was elected probate judge, an honor which has been re-conferred upon him every election since save that of 1884. During the lapse of these years Judge Perkins has maintained a uniform record of generosity, probity and progressiveness. He has become identified with many movements looking to the betterment of local condion him every election since save that mone, and has given freely of his time a d means for such purposes.

His Social and Business Relations, First of all Judge Perkins is a repubhean, yet not of the intolerant order. He claims for himself the utmost liberty of thought and freedom of expression, and allows to others all that he asks for himself. He is an ardent republican because he is wedded to the principles which constitute the repubfor that party and has maintained an unswerving allegience thereto from trustee of the Congregational church, president of the Grand Rapids Veneer company, director of the Grand Rapids Chair company, a member of the board of trade and of the Improvement board, and interested in other enterprises. He is proprieter of much valuable real estate in the city, owning property in nearly every ward.

In Social Life, Socially Judge Perkins enjoys an enviable position. He is associated with the leading social organizations of the city and takes an active part in their promotion and welfare. His spacious residence on Washington street has friendships and acquaintances. In private life the judge is a most genial gentleman, strong in his personal at-tachments and friendly in his inter-course with all. He enjoys the esteem and confidence of a wide circle of acquaintances.

His Official Character. In all of his official acts Judge Perkins has proven himself to possess unusual judicial ability and unswerving fidelity to the trust reposed in him. His official task is one of the most irksome which devolves upon any county officer. Though it is not a greatly remunerative one, it nevertheless, demands constant application and the highest in-tegrity and intelligence. These exacting conditions have been met by Judge Perkins for twenty years. In all this time the rigitant eye of public scrutiny has been upon him, and individuals have watched his course with selfish motives. With these the talent of the bench and bar has marked the logic of his judicial decisions and sought to circumvent it. nder these trying conditions Judge Perkins has administrated the affairs senator from the nineteenth district, of his office with credit to his profession, with bonor to himself and with Notwithstanding the fact that thousands upon thousands of dollars worth of property, in the f rm of trusts, wills and estates, is annually dispersed by his judicial determina-tions, and the sacred rights of orphans and unfortunates await his adjudication, and are disposed by him, in all these supreme tests. Judge Perkins has been found upon the side of right

Of perfect purity. Of great strongth. and justice. In all these his course has been sustained by the higher courts and by the verdict of public opinion. Sie Cialin to Office.

Upon this record Judge Perkins comes before the voters this fall for re-election. The justice of this claim no man can contradict. The wisdom of granting it is also clear. No consider-ation, either public or private, is of greater or more vital interest to the community than the safe cust dy and settlement of estates. In this honesty of purpose, understanding of the situ-ation and knowledge gained by expe-rience are the three prime requisites. In Judge Perkins all these comoine. He should be re-elected.

Allen B. Morse Isn't Talking for Publication,

BUT HIS CHANCES ARE GOOD

He Admits It Himself, Although He Is Not in the City on Any Political

Somebody must have presented Allen B. Morse with a rabbit's foot, for the democratic aspirant for gubernatorial honors occupied room No. 13 at the Morton house during his stay in this city. However, it is barely possible brains into his grandfather's hat than that the judge selected that room to "queer" the other "hoodoos" that the Michigan democrats are striving to overcome in this campaign. There wasn't any p lities in Judge Morse's visit to Grand Rapide. He told a reporter for THE HERALD there waen't, and if there is any man in Michigan that knows politics when he sees it, it's Ailen B. Moree of Ionia.

"No, I'm here only to address the veterans of the old Twenty-first," he said. "That is all," and the lonia patriot slyly winked the other eye. Judge Morse isn't talking politics much Judge Morse isn't talking politics much for publication these days either. He isn't saying a word, is Judge Morse. Every time he discusses politics for that purpose he makes a break, and consequently will be seen in his own unrivaled sphinx act until election day. When he does talk, it is in a vague, non-committal sort of a way—as if he expected that somebody was getting ready to spring a loaded cigar on him or propose a green goods game. This isn't propose a green goods game. This isn't due to any squeamishness he feels about election, because the outlook for the democratic state ticket is first class, and if the frost hange off its going to be elected. That's what Judge Morse says. "The outlook is good."

Those are his words. "The outlook is good from a democratic standpoint." And then the judge went into a corner to consult with Peter Doran and Sam Simon LaGrou and Andy Fyfe will ber of votes that his old soldier's re-speak at Kiump's hall, Burton avenue, union speeches will bring into the folds of the great the state of the great t

CONCERNING TEA.

Charles Mullan Discusses the Condition of the Trade.

Charles Mullan of San Francisco was a guest at the Morton yesterday. Mr. Mullan is connected with the firm of Siegtried & Brandenstein, importers and tea firers. "There has been a fairly heavy crop of tea this year" he said, "and most of it is on the market. Most of the Japan tea is picked before the first of May, and all of it is on the market here before the last of August. The Ceylon tea is coming on the market in large quantities, but there is a comparatively light demand for it in America. Most Americans prefer the green Japan teas. There is very little blending and miling done with the teas consumed in America. Most of the miling is done in London and none but black teas are used. The Americans do not seem to take kindly to the black teas and so the little that is consumed is shipped by way of London. Most of the Ceylon tea is marketed in London too. The China and Japan Circuit Court Court School, and one hundred twenty five (125), and one hundred twenty fi sumed is shipped by way of London.

Most of the Ceylon tea is marketed in London too. The China and Japan teas are grown by the natives and sold to the firers. They fire it and put it in chests, after which it is sent to London, New York and San Francisco. Most of the large houses are English and American concerns and the market is practically controlled by them."

Isaac Hilson left yesterday for California. He will stop over a few days in Chicago and Denver.

The members of Mission Wood church are making great preparations for their oyster supper Friday night. Complaint is made that persons pushing baby cabs on the sidewalks are un-mindful of the safety of pedestrians.
